Background

Central Writing & Editing Services was established by Denise Holden in 2006 to provide editing, proofreading and writing services to the corporate and government sectors.

Holden's undergraduate degree was in commerce with a major in statistics. She followed this with a master's degree in writing incorporating a graduate certificate in editing and publishing.

She has completed professional development courses through the NSW Writers' Centre and Society of Editors (NSW) and is accredited by the Institute of Professional Editors (IPEd).

Early in her career Holden worked as a media analyst and researcher in the advertising industry. Her corporate management roles encompassed marketing, media, advertising and research with responsibility for document, presentation and report production.

She has extensive experience in numerical reports, statistics and analysis. She assumed her first editor role in 1995 as editor of Media Update, a monthly newsletter reporting on trends in the media industry.

Industry involvement

Holden is a member of several writing and editing industry organisations both in Australia and overseas. She was editor of the Society of Editors (NSW) newsletter Blue Pencil from 2008 to 2011, a member of the 2012 IPEd Standards Revision Working Group and the NSW delegate to the IPEd Review working party in 2013–14.
